Recovery

Step Five

“Admitted to God, to ourselves, and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs.”

Twelve Steps deflate ego. Step Five is difficult but necessary to sobriety and peace of mind. Confession is an ancient discipline. Without fearless admission of defects, few could stay sober. What do we receive from Step Five? Beginning of true kinship with man and God. Lose sense of isolation, receive forgiveness and give it; learn humility; gain honesty and realism about ourselves. Necessity for complete honesty. Danger of rationalization. How to choose the person in whom to confide. Results are tranquility and consciousness of God. Oneness with God and man prepares us for following Steps.

Unity

Tradition Four

“Each group has but one primary purpose - to carry the message to the alcoholic who still suffers.”

Better do one thing well than many badly. The life of our Fellowship depends on this principle. The ability of each A.A. to identify himself with and bring recovery to the newcomer is a gift from God . . . passing on this gift to others is our one aim. Sobriety can’t be kept unless it is given away.

Service

Concept Four

Throughout our world service structure, a traditional “Right of Appeal” ought to prevail, thus assuring us that minority opinion will be heard and that petitions for the redress of personal grievances will be carefully considered.
THE mystery of slips is not so deep as may appear. While it does seem odd that an alcoholic who has restored himself to a dignified place among his fellow-men, and continued dry for years, should suddenly throw all his happiness overboard and find himself again in mortal peril of drowning in liquor—often the reason is very simple.

People are inclined to say: "There is something peculiar about alcoholics. They may seem to be well, yet at any moment they may turn back to their old ways. You can never be sure!"

This is largely twaddle. The alcoholic is a sick person. Under the techniques of Alcoholics Anonymous he gets well, that is to say, his disease is arrested. There is nothing unpredictable about him any more than there is anything weird about a person who has arrested diabetes.

Let's get it clear, once and for all, that alcoholics are human beings just like other human beings—then we can safeguard ourselves intelligently against most of the slips.

Both in professional and lay circles, there is a tendency to label everything that an alcoholic may do as "alcoholic behavior." The truth is, it is simply human nature!

It is very wrong to consider many of the personality traits observed in liquor addicts as peculiar to the alcoholic. Emotional and mental quirks are classified as symptoms of alcoholism merely because alcoholics have them—yet those same quirks can be found among nonalcoholics, too. Actually they are symptoms of mankind!

Of course, the alcoholic himself tends to think of himself as different; someone special, with unique tendencies and reactions. Many psychiatrists, doctors and therapists carry the same idea to extremes in their analyses and treatment of alcoholics. Sometimes they make a complicated mystery of a condition which is found in all human beings, whether they drink whiskey or buttermilk.

To be sure, alcoholism like every other disease does manifest itself in some unique ways. It does have a number of baffling peculiarities which differ from all other diseases. At the same time, many of the symptoms and much of the behavior of alcoholism are closely paralleled and even duplicated in other diseases.

The alcoholic "slip," as it is known in Alcoholics Anonymous, furnishes a perfect example of how human nature can be mistaken for alcoholic behavior.

The "slip" is a relapse! It is a relapse that occurs after the alcoholic has stopped drinking and started on the A.A. program of recovery. "Slips" usually occur in the early stages of the alcoholic's A.A. indoctrination, before he has had time to learn enough of the A.A. technique and A.A. philosophy to give him solid footing. But "slips" may also occur after an alcoholic has been a member of A.A. for many months, or even several years, and it is in this kind, above all, that one finds a marked similarity between the alcoholic's behavior and "normal" victims of other diseases.

No one is startled by the fact that relapses are not uncommon among arrested tubercular patients. But here is a startling fact—the cause is often the same as the cause which leads to "slips" for the alcoholic. It happens this way:

When a tubercular patient recovers sufficiently to be released from the sanitarium, the doctor gives him careful directions for the way he is to live when he gets home. He must be in bed every night by, say, 8 o'clock. He must drink plenty of milk. He must refrain from smoking. He must obey other stringent rules.

For the first several months, perhaps for several years the patient follows directions. But as his strength increases and he feels fully recovered, he becomes slack. There may come the night when he decides he can stay up until 10 p.m. When he does this, nothing untoward happens. The next day he still feels good. He does it again. Soon he is disregarding the directions given him when he left the sanitarium. Eventually he has a relapse!

The same tragedy can be found in cardiac cases. After the heart attack, the patient is put on a strict rest schedule. Frightened, he naturally follows directions obediently for a long time. He, too, goes to bed early, avoids exercise such as walking up stairs, quits smoking and leads a Spartan life. Eventually, though, there comes a day after he has been feeling good for months, or several years, when he feels he has regained his strength and has also recovered from his fright. If the elevator is out of repair one day, he walks up the three flights of stairs. Or, he decides to go to a party—or do just a little smoking—or take a cocktail or two. If no serious after-effects follow the first departure from the rigorous schedule prescribed he may try it again, until he suffers a relapse.

In both cardiac and the tubercular cases, the acts which led to the relapses were preceded by wrong thinking. The patient in each case rationalized himself out of a sense of his own perilous reality. He deliberately turned away from this knowledge of the fact he had been the victim of a serious disease. He grew overconfident. He decided he didn't have to follow directions.

Now that is precisely what happens with the alcoholic—the arrested alcoholic, or the alcoholic in A.A.—who has a "slip." Obviously he decides again to take a drink sometime before he actually takes it. He starts thinking wrong before he actually embarks on the course that leads to a "slip."

There is no more reason to charge the "slip" to alcoholic behavior than there is to lay a tubercular relapse to tubercular behavior or a second heart attack to cardiac behavior.

The alcoholic "slip" is not a symptom of a psychotic condition. There's nothing "screwy" about it at all. The patient simply didn't follow directions. And that's human nature! It's life! It's happening all the time, not merely among alcoholics but among all kinds of people.

The preventative is plain. The patient must have full knowledge of his condition, keep in mind the facts of his case and the nature of his disease and follow directions.

For the alcoholic, A.A. offers the directions. A vital factor, or ingredient, of the preventative, especially for the alcoholic, is sustained emotion. The alcoholic who learns some of the technique or the mechanics of A.A. but misses the philosophy or the spirit may get tired of following directions—not because he is alcoholic but because he is human. Rules and regulations irk almost anyone, because they are restraining, prohibitive, negative. The philosophy of A.A., however, is positive and provides ample sustained emotion—a sustained desire to follow directions voluntarily.

In any event, the psychology of the alcoholic is not as different as some people try to make it. The disease has certain physical differences, yes, and the alcoholic has problems peculiar to him, perhaps, in that he has been put on the defensive and consequently has developed nervous frustrations. But, in many instances, there is no more reason to be talking about "the alcoholic mind" than there is to try to describe something called "the cardiac mind" or "the t.b. mind."

I think we'll help the alcoholic more if we can first recognize that he is primarily a human being—afflicted with human nature!

IT'S A SQUIRMY word--"spiritual." It makes me uncomfortable. It reminds me of the time I spent as a child sitting in a church and trying to look holy. "Spiritual" is confused in my mind with a kind of prayer and has connotations of mediums, levitation, and ghosts.

Worse, "spiritual" implies pretensions of sainthood, a hypocritical posturing, and pretended preoccupation with wonderful thoughts—when I and everybody else know that ninety percent of my day is spent trying to keep the wolf from the door and the horse before the cart.

My spiritual inventory doesn't help much, either. This very day, as I lay in bed staring piously at the ceiling, I took the Third and Eleventh Steps firmly, fondly, and resolutely. I thought warmly of all the great tasks I would accomplish today with the aid of my trusty Third and Eleventh. Then I got out of bed.

In midwinter, with the window open and the heat turned down, getting out of a warm bed apparently is, for me, an act of will of the highest spiritual order. This monumental achievement seems to exhaust my store of spiritual strength for the day.

By ten o'clock, I have a number of creative suggestions to offer my Higher Power on how my life and will might be gainfully employed. I have a serene acceptance of God's will for me as long as it happens to conform to mine.

By 2:00 PM, I have decided to mix a little of my will for me with His, since knowledge of His will is a little slow in coming and there are problems in need of immediate attention—like meeting the payroll, hardly a matter of celestial concern.

By 6:00 PM, I have decided to let the other fellow alone and not get so upset about how he's living his life, you can watch more TV.

In midwinter, with the window open and the heat turned down, getting out of a warm bed apparently is, for me, an act of will of the highest spiritual order. This monumental achievement seems to exhaust my store of spiritual strength for the day.

That's a start. All that wisdom leads me to suspect that the path of spiritual progress is perhaps not so steep and dark as I had imagined. At least, I can try to understand it without getting all smug and lofty.

For starters, I know that I am a walking miracle. Literally overnight, I went from years of twenty-four-hour crash drinking to total sobriety, after everything had failed except total surrender to the AA program. That is a fact I can stand on.

And as I peel away the layers of day-to-day expediency, I realize that my zigzag, erratic, and inconsistent course was in the general direction of progress all the time. That's good.

Concentrate on what you're doing--it beats thinking.

Don't take anything too seriously, including all of the above.

It is better to watch the game in your undershirt with a can of cola in your hand than a can of beer.

I don't know exactly what that means, but it sure is true.
When it was time to admit, she spent some quiet time in a very special place under the sky

STEP FIVE: Admitted to God, to ourselves, and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs.

I did my Fifth Step today. After I was done, it was recommended that I spend some quiet time alone reflecting on what I had just done, then proceed on with Steps Six and Seven if I felt ready.

When I got home, I went outside to my special place among some trees that I’m particularly fond of. There is a little bistro set where I can sit and meditate and enjoy the outdoors. It is my place of serenity.

I sat in the dark and talked to the God of my understanding. I admitted my wrongs and asked God for forgiveness. I thought about my character defects, especially the ones that I use to comfort myself. I realized that safe in God’s love, under his protection and care, I didn’t need them anymore. I searched my heart for refusal to let go. I found none. I told God I didn’t know how to live a life without my defects but I was willing to lay them down, willing to have them removed, and I asked him to remove them.

Some people burn their Fourth Step inventories at this point. I wasn’t ready to burn mine. I figured I might need it some day.

But there was a particular event in my life that I wrote about in a book separate from the one I used for my Step work. This event was not something that was my fault. It was something that left me with a lot of pain and confusion and questions that could never be answered. When I had strong feelings about it, I would go back and write about it in this book. It was my secret book. I read a section from it when I did my Fifth Step.

As I thought about it, I realized I was ready to let this event go. I didn’t need the answers anymore. I could not know the truth. God knew and that was enough. So I decided to burn the book.

As it burned, I gave it to God and I was free from the hold it had over me. I thought about the rest of my written work. I was ready to let my resentments go. I decided to burn that portion of my inventory. As it burned, I thought about my part in the situations. I had done wrong. But wrong also had been done to me. It is difficult to explain, but whatever I owed, whatever was owed to me, I gave over to God. God is the keeper of the balance now, not me.

And then I thought about my list of fears. I doubt I will ever be free of fear, but I knew I was ready to stop living with its constant presence. I was ready to stop letting it rule my life, ready to let faith in God replace fear. I put those fears in the fire and gave them to God.

Next…relationships. By this time, I knew God had already forgiven me for the wrongs recorded on those pages. It was time to forgive myself and move forward. I set it on fire and gave it to God.

Next was my asset list. That had been the hardest part of my inventory. It had taken me over a year to see and believe that I had any assets at all. I could not burn that. Again, I might need it.

And then…the summary pages. This included a written list of my character defects. At first I thought I should hold on to this too. I might need to refer back to it. But then I realized I didn’t need a written list of what’s wrong with me. I want to focus on what’s right with me—the positive, not the negative. God knows what’s wrong with me and where I need to work. I set it on fire and gave it to God.

All the while I was burning the pages, I was talking to God, telling him all the things I was giving to him. As I watched the flames of the fire die down and fade away, there was a peace in my soul like I have never known before.

In the quiet, a thought came to me from somewhere else: Would you give all your bad to God and not give your good?

I saw the list of my assets lying there on the ground where I had set it aside. I picked up the list and looked at it once more. I knew that this part of me belonged to God as well. I set it on fire and I gave it to God.

YOU'RE still drinking, Friend? Then you're just the man I want to see. Want to ask you a question. Over here, where we won't be disturbed.

Question's this: Wonder if you've seen my dragon? Name of Beastly. Nice little guy. For a dragon. Green, with pink spots. Believe me, you couldn't miss ole Beastly!

I was sobbing my eyes out one night because the park bench I was on was going through red lights and I was scared stiff. Suddenly this dragon whammed into the bench and stopped it cold. If I’d thought I was scared before, Friend, now I was petrified. A dragon. Imagine!

"What'th the matter with you, Mithter?" he asked, and that started me laughing like a school kid. Somehow you can't be really scared of a dragon that lisps.

"Thtopp laughing!" he fumed, and believe me. Friend, I thtopped. I mean stopped. On second thought, you can be scared of a lisping dragon, especially when he closes the damper and flames shoot out of his mouth.

"Thanks for stopping the bench," I said.

"Nothing. Nothing at all." At least he was modest.

Turned out the lil' fella didn't have a name, so I called him Beastly, which described him pretty well. Besides, he liked the name. Beastly also liked the smell of sherry. He always came around when I drank it, and sometimes stayed for days after.

Usually, however, he would disappear when I was broke and had to work for a day or two (as a rule I took a position as Asst. Director of a Dishwashing Dept., Wet Arms Division), but Beastly always showed up again when I got a crock of sherry.

When Beastly stopped that park bench he was about three feet long, but it was amazing how he grew. About a foot a month. At first, he was fun to play with. Throw sticks, that sort of thing. He'd bring 'em back unless he got confused and burned 'em up. But in six months it got to the point where he could stop a Sherman tank with his breath, the ground shook under him when he ran, and if he ran too close to me, the wind would knock me down.

Once a cop found me in that position and asked, "What's the matter with you, fella?" I said, "It was Beastly," and he agreed, but wouldn't accept it as an answer.

Then he smelled the sherry and hauled me off to the cooler, which was dragon proof.

I never saw Beastly again. You see, an AA visited me in jail last month and I got on the program, and since they don't allow spotted dragons to join. . . .

Well, I smelled the sherry on you, Friend, and just thought you might have seen my old pet Beastly. Greatest little dragon I ever met.

When the right guy showed up to help him through the Fifth Step, his life changed forever.

I came into the program in 1997. At first I used women as my Higher Power, but in July of 1999, after two trips to prison and a lot more pain, something finally stuck and I got sober.

Good things started happening in my life. I got out and got married to a special woman who taught me what love really was. I soon became an assistant manager at a large retail store. I was going to AA meetings and I was involved in service at the local and area levels.

I was happy, but being the alcoholic that I am, I thought I only needed some of the Steps. I really didn’t want to do all of them. I definitely didn’t want to do the Fourth Step because that would mean a complete housecleaning, bringing up all the skeletons of my past. So it was not surprising that I started making decisions based on self. During that time, it was only by the grace of God that I didn’t drink.

After one of those self-centered decisions, and with seven years of sobriety, I ended up in prison with a 17-year sentence hanging over my head. Fortunately, I was able to at least hold on to the honesty in my program, and when I went to court, I pleaded guilty without any plea deal because I didn’t want to put my family through the pain of a trial. It was one of the few unselfish things I did during that time.

My Higher Power, being all-powerful, was still looking out for me. I only had to spend a very short amount of time in one of the most dangerous penitentiaries in the country. I was then transferred to another much-less-dangerous prison. Inmates at that place had fights and there were occasional stabbings, but it was nothing like the first prison.

When I first got to the new prison I thought, Man, I should start an AA meeting. I thought I knew so much about AA after my years of sobriety. I would take my Big Book up to a little room attached to the common area in the housing unit and sit for an hour, one day a week. I can’t really remember what day of the week it was, but I did that for a month or two. I couldn’t figure out why no one was coming up there to have me educate them about AA. Maybe it was because my own house wasn’t in order; I really had nothing to offer someone else.

After I was there a year, the administrators started having an AA meeting brought in from the outside and I would go and share my “knowledge” with them. During this time I was so grateful that my Higher Power was with me, because on Mother’s Day 2008, my mother passed away. It was only because I could feel my Higher Power there with me that I did not start drinking. Those people who think there isn’t alcohol in prison have never been in prison. Alcohol was all around me—everywhere.

After about three years, I was transferred to another prison, one with a lower security level. When I got there, I heard they had an AA meeting. So of course I had to go and share my insight. I did that when it was convenient for me because the meeting was in the morning and sometimes I needed more sleep.

But one day I made it to the meeting and I heard someone sharing from the heart. He had that “light” that you see and hear in someone who’s really working a program.

The more I listened and watched, the more I knew that this guy was the real deal. I really wanted what he had.

After a couple of meetings, he asked me if he could take me through the Big Book. “We’ll go through the book word-for-word,” he said. “And I won’t put any spin on it.” At that time, I was in so much emotional pain and needed someone who I could trust to get some secrets off my chest. So I agreed.

We met one day a week to work through the Big Book. We even took the Steps in order, and when it came to taking the Fourth Step, it happened easily because I had done the first three Steps to the best of my ability. I can’t say that it wasn’t painful. It was. My sponsor told me that if I didn’t do the Step both thoroughly and honestly, I was only hurting myself. He also said that if I did it right, it would be worth it. So I poured it all out on paper.

We met every day for a week or so. Soon, everything I had done and everybody I could remember was down on paper. A few days later, we met out on the bleachers on the yard and I did my Fifth Step. I read everything I had written down (I’m getting goose bumps writing this). My sponsor did not get up and run away screaming, “This guy is crazy!” He just sat there, listened and asked a few questions, and then we were done. Afterward, I felt a new freedom that words cannot describe. My Big Book now has two dates: July 3, 1999—the first day of my sobriety, and October 13, 2003—my first day of true freedom.

I’m still in prison and I don’t do this thing perfectly. Still, I do my best each day to keep my side of the street clean. I use the tools that I have been given, now more than ever. Each day I try to help people and not hurt them. If I do something wrong, I try to fix it right then.

I’ve been given some very important gifts: 1) I have family who still love me and treat me well; 2) I get to live life on life’s terms; and 3) I get the honor of taking other guys in prison through the Big Book and the Steps, exactly the way my sponsor did with me—with no spin on it.

Even though not all the guys I work with will stay sober, they still help me stay sober. I’ve had one guy make it clear through and he’s now in the process of taking someone else through the book, while I’ve started again with someone else.

I never thought I would be able to say this, but here I am, in prison, behind a double-walled fence lined with concertina wire, and yet I’m freer now than I’ve ever been.

Here’s an interesting miracle: When my sponsor had been convicted but not yet sentenced, the prosecutor said he wanted him to serve at least 10 years. In the end, the judge sentenced him to five. The whole time my sponsor was going through the court system, he kept going to AA meetings, helping other alcoholics and doing the things that his sponsor suggested. The day he was sentenced, the judge gave him a few days to get his affairs in order. On one of those days, he was talking to someone in his sponsorship chain and the man told him, “You are not being sentenced to prison, you’re being called.”

And that’s where I met my sponsor, in prison. The miracle is that he was released after having been incarcerated far, far less than the five years he was sentenced to. I believe with all my heart that my loving Higher Power sent my sponsor to me because I was

Taking the Fifth... With Honesty

Honesty is a highly valued character asset in A.A. And with good reason. My honesty is a mark of my respect for myself and for others in my life. It is also a measure of my ability to face the reality of who and what I am, where I have been and where I am headed, and of the experiences that have shaped me. All of the above included many failures, a lot of shame and guilt around my alcoholic misadventures and, in the early years, a fairly bleak expectation of who I might become. Most of all, I had to dispel the notion that being an alcoholic made me special in any way, and to realize that coming to grips with one’s own reality is simply a part of the human condition. I was somewhat retarded in coming to this understanding, but better late than never.

Before I could become honest, I had to learn trust - not trust in others to treat my honesty with respect, but trust in myself to survive the vulnerability that honesty often exposes me to. Regardless of what anyone says, what you think of me does matter, and I think it should matter, because I don’t live in an isolated bubble, but in community with others. However, what I think of myself is ultimately more important if I am to remain honest with others.

I also had to learn not to treat meetings as an open forum where I could thoughtlessly spew my truth without thinking. That kind of “unloading” held more than a hint of self-deception as well as a healthy dose of attention seeking. I came to understand that my honesty needed to be treated with respect and not used as a tool to get approval. I will always remember my therapist telling me that if I were Catholic, and felt I had sinned, I could confess to my priest, but there was no need to announce it to the entire congregation. Meetings were not the right place to float the truth just to see what I could get away with. I have seen too many members flee AA after oversharing their truth, and understand why, since I fled, myself, for over two decades. I stayed sober, but denied myself the comfort and the growth I might have found in the community of AA. I am grateful that I was able to return years later and be welcomed.

Then, there’s the selection of whom I choose to share the “exact nature of my wrongs” with. Nowhere in the Big Book does it say that “...another human being” needs to be my sponsor. Nor does it say that I need to share my entire Fifth Step with one person. For some of us, it can be a priest, minister, or pastor. For others, it could even be a complete stranger. For me, it was my therapist, every week over a period of 10 1/2 years. Let me tell you, that was a whole lot of sharing. And that’s what it took.

Lastly, I have learned that my tolerance for honesty has grown with practice. In my earlier sobriety, I truly didn’t understand what it meant to be honest with myself, much less anyone else. Then I began to understand honesty, but didn’t entirely trust it. I proceeded with caution until experience taught me when, where, and with whom I could be, and needed to be, honest. I also came to understand that I couldn’t allow my honesty and devotion to the truth overstep the privacy of others, because my truth was often intertwined with the experiences of others.

More often than not, I now lead with honesty because, coming from a place of benign self interest, I have learned that it serves me well, for all kinds of reasons. If I’m able to be up front with my errors, I don’t need worry so much about making mistakes, and certainly not about “being caught”. I can make amends and restitution, so I no longer have to sit alone with my feelings of failure, guilt, and shame. My ability to be honest has brought me closer to those around me, because I am showing them the real me, and telling them my real story. Because I am showing others the real me, I usually feel seen, heard, and known. And that’s a miracle for those of us who grew up isolated and desperate for company. I have found no room for loneliness and despair in an honest life.

Just Listening
Grapevine, May 2017

Though nervous to sit down with a woman she did not know, she had time, experience and with God’s help, an open ear

I rolled out of bed onto my knees this morning. I asked the God of my understanding for his will for me. I thought about the day ahead. Tonight I would be doing something I had never done before. I would be listening to another woman’s Fifth Step. This woman was someone I had never met. She was currently in an alcoholic treatment center.

I prayed for her. I asked God to fill me with his love and let me be a channel to send his love to her. I asked for her to have the courage to say what she needed to say. I prayed about the Fifth Step throughout the day. I want to be able to convey God’s love. Because of what I’ve seen and felt, I have no doubts about his love. Even when I think I don’t feel it at all, I still I know it’s there.

I asked God several times if I could be allowed to give her an insight into the beauty and depth of his love. I realize I don’t actually know the width and depth of God’s love. But I know it’s great.

When I met the woman to do her Fifth Step, I liked her right away. I could see she had her brave face on. That “muscle through it” face. I saw myself in her face.

We started with prayer. I began by thanking God for loving us so much. God was most definitely present. When she got to the point in her story where her life went seriously wrong, I was thinking I could not relate. My life had not been anything like hers. I started praying to myself. I told God I couldn’t relate. I didn’t know what to say. I quietly asked him to please help me help her, to put the right words in my mouth, the right thoughts in my head.

What came to me immediately was ... wait ... just listen ... let her do this ... settle down ... just listen. So I did.

Soon I realized that her pain was the same as mine. Our pain had been brought about by only slightly different circumstances. Apart from details, we were the same. Betrayal, abuse, neglect, abandonment—the same. The determination, the search, the failures—the same. Anger, resentment, retaliation, confusion, mistakes, bad decisions, lost hopes, lost dreams, lost cause, trying to cope in a world gone horribly wrong—all the same. My pain was not unique.

For me, this was huge. We identified with each other. We were human. We weren’t separate; we became closer. It gave me grace and forgiveness. It gave me mercy and compassion. It helped me just be me and let her be her. I could see that we were both just trying to cope the best we could.

When the woman finished her story, I talked a little bit about my life and my own experiences. She saw that we had the same stuff. I could see her relief. I could see her relax. We both knew we were not alone. If it’s possible for one person to relay to another the love of God, then I was indeed allowed to do so that night. We were one alcoholic relating to another.

When I left her, I said, “It was a very good night.” She turned and looked at me and smiled and said, “Yes, it was.”

I don’t know if she’ll be able to maintain sobriety. That’s not up to me. But I do know she saw a glimpse into a different life tonight and that everything happened exactly the way it was supposed to. For her and for me.
ON MY FOURTH sober AA day, I was sitting alone in one of our musty old meeting rooms, very sad and very broke. All the AAs had seemed very kind in their desire to help, but none of them had mentioned money. And, like thousands of other new members, I believed my biggest problems were financial. Yet not one person had offered a loan.

Then, suddenly, one of those big, handsome, gray-templed, well-dressed old-timers strode in with a friendly smile widening his face. He stuck out his hand and squeezed mine. “If I can help you in any way at all, just say so, and I’ll do it!” he declared heartily.

Trying to sound as if I were merely asking for a match, I said, “I hope so. You see, I need to borrow two thousand dollars.”

His silence was total.

But finally he spoke. “You're in the wrong place,” he said firmly. “We don't lend money here, my friend. That's not what this place is for.”

I froze, but he went on and on. “We won't help you with a money problem. We won't help you with a family problem or a job or clothes or a medical problem or food or a place to spend the night. All we will do in AA is help you stay sober,” he explained. “Then you can take care of these other problems yourself. You can take care of yourself, can't you, if you're sober?”

I hated that word "sober." But what could I say? "Certainly,” I snapped, humiliated that, in my ignorance of AA "folkways, I had been caught in a faux pas, as if someone had found me eating peas with my fingers.

What the man had said made perfectly good sense. I had been sober a few days and could take care of things. So I put my gradually clearing mind to it, remembered a cousin I had not tapped for months, sent a wire, and got some dough.

To my astonishment and sorrow, I almost instantly found myself drunk.

Within a few hours, my new AA benefactor had given me in very blunt words a sharp summary of Traditions Five, Six, and Seven. And, by getting drunk, I had illustrated perfectly the special sense behind Five. What I needed most was not money, obviously. After getting it, I still had the drinking problem that had made me think of approaching AA in the first place.

This happened in January 1945, and the first hint of the Twelve Traditions was not to appear anywhere in AA until the July 1945 issue of the Grapevine, when Bill W. wrote, "I would like to discuss in coming issues such topics as anonymity, leadership, public relations, the use of money in AA, and the like.”

Therefore, what I encountered in AA during my first few months, before the Traditions were formalized, were customs of AA behavior followed by members who had learned that some AA ways would work, and others would not.

That is the authority of the Traditions in my personal life. I honor them, not solely because of their authorship or their having the mystical number twelve or their being adopted by the Fellowship at the First International Convention in Cleveland in 1950. I cherish them because they work. They enable me and my fellow AAs to stay sober, together, and to carry our message to other alcoholics.

But I did not like the Traditions at first, especially when they conflicted with what I wanted. I was a suspicious character, often turning phony operator to get what I wanted. During those first weeks, I kept wondering what "those AAs" were really up to or after, and what I could get out of them.

The real miracle is that most of them acted with extraordinary kindness. No matter what I tried to maneuver out of them, they tried just to give me the message.

In subsequent years, I tried to misuse AA in two ways; that is, I tried to get more out of it than the sobriety message. Once, I wangled a part-time job from a fellow member, then took advantage of him. Coming in late, I would excuse myself by thinking, "After all, we’re both alcoholics; he ought to excuse my little weaknesses.” He exploited me, too, expecting long hours of unpaid work simply because I was a fellow AA. We began to concentrate on what we were owed, not on what we as AAs owed each other. Neither of us got drunk, but our friendship did not survive.

Another time, I tried to use AA for romance, and really did find balm for a lonely heart with an AA partner. We found romance, all right, but we lost our sobriety.

Years have gone by since I had AA infancy as an excuse for my gimme tendencies. Today, I try to look at the Fifth Tradition as a giver, not as a taker. But the picture is not pretty enough to brag about. It isn’t always easy, even now, to keep my personal wants out of the way when I try to carry the message. I want applause as an AA speaker, compliments as a Grapevine writer. I want to be a “success” as a sponsor—that is, I want to be the one who sobered somebody up!

I have found I prefer to carry the message to pleasant, attractive, grateful alcoholics who do what I say and give me full credit for their sobriety. Sometimes I wish I did not even have to carry the message at all; I wish I could just wait where I am for people to come and pick it up.

On the other hand, I rejoice that I can now participate in so many good ways of fulfilling our primary purpose. I can help put on public meetings and other public-information activities to carry the message to the alcoholics who are still out there drinking, sick, scared, completely unaware that we want them, and completely wrong in their notion of what our sober life is like. I can be on our hospital and jail-committees. I can serve on my group’s hospitality committee, to welcome the ill-at-ease new man. I can attend or lead beginners meetings. I can help support our local Intergroup office and the AA General Service Office, which reach drunk in places I cannot get to. I can have coffee with the new man after the meeting, instead of running off to chin and gossip with my old friends.

Yes, my group (made up of individual AAs, including me) has improved a lot in its information activities to carry the message to the alcoholics who are still out there drinking, sick, scared, completely unaware that we want them, and completely wrong in their notion of what our sober life is like. I can be on our hospital and jail-committees. I can serve on my group’s hospitality committee, to welcome the ill-at-ease new man. I can attend or lead beginners meetings. I can help support our local Intergroup office and the AA General Service Office, which reach drunk in places I cannot get to. I can have coffee with the new man after the meeting, instead of running off to chin and gossip with my old friends.

Yes, my group (made up of individual AAs, including me) has improved a lot in its respect for our Fifth Tradition—in its ways of carrying the message. My own AA history has lengthened considerably since I first caught glimpses of the sobriety-preserving wisdom in the AA ways of doing things, summed up in our Traditions. But I have recently discovered something else quite wonderful about the Fifth: It does not say that AAs should help only newcomers.

I do not agree that the newcomer is the most important member at any meeting. In my opinion, equally important are those old-timers who showed me the way, and any middle-timer who may today be suffering. If newcomers are indeed the lifeblood of AA, old- and middle-timers are its skin and backbone. What a bewildered mess we would be in without them!

So in your next meeting, when that Tradition about carrying the message ”to the alcoholic who still suffers” is mentioned, please give a thought, not only to newcomers, but also to the alcoholics older in AA who are sitting there. One of them might be me. I still suffer, sometimes. I still need to hear the message, always.

Tradition Five
Each group has but one primary purpose - to carry its message to the alcoholic who still suffers.
Grapevine, June 1970

ON MY FOURTH sober AA day, I was sitting alone in one of our musty old meeting rooms, very sad and very broke. All the AAs had seemed very kind in their desire to help, but none of them had mentioned money. And, like thousands of other new members, I believed my biggest problems were financial. Trying to sound as if I were merely asking for a match, I said, “I hope so. You see, I need to borrow two thousand dollars.”

His silence was total.

But finally he spoke. "You're in the wrong place," he said firmly. "We don't lend money here, my friend. That's not what this place is for."

"Then you can take care of these other problems yourself. You can take care of yourself, can't you, if you're sober?"

I hated that word "sober." But what could I say? "Certainly," I snapped, humiliated that, in my ignorance of AA "folkways, I had been caught in a faux pas, as if someone had found me eating peas with my fingers.

What the man had said made perfectly good sense. I had been sober a few days and could take care of things. So I put my gradually clearing mind to it, remembered a cousin I had not tapped for months, sent a wire, and got some dough.

To my astonishment and sorrow, I almost instantly found myself drunk.

Within a few hours, my new AA benefactor had given me in very blunt words a sharp summary of Traditions Five, Six, and Seven. And, by getting drunk, I had illustrated perfectly the special sense behind Five. What I needed most was not money, obviously. After getting it, I still had the drinking problem that had made me think of approaching AA in the first place.

This happened in January 1945, and the first hint of the Twelve Traditions was not to appear anywhere in AA until the July 1945 issue of the Grapevine, when Bill W. wrote, "I would like to discuss in coming issues such topics as anonymity, leadership, public relations, the use of money in AA, and the like."

Therefore, what I encountered in AA during my first few months, before the Traditions were formalized, were customs of AA behavior followed by members who had learned that some AA ways would work, and others would not.

That is the authority of the Traditions in my personal life. I honor them, not solely because of their authorship or their having the mystical number twelve or their being adopted by the Fellowship at the First International Convention in Cleveland in 1950. I cherish them because they work. They enable me and my fellow AAs to stay sober, together, and to carry our message to other alcoholics.
In my third month of sobriety, I was finally ready to do my Fourth Step, but I did not have a sponsor. I had this stubborn idea that because I felt betrayed in a failed relationship when I was 19, I would never trust anyone else the rest of my life. At 36, I brought that idea with me to AA. Though I was ready to do a Fourth Step, I wasn’t confident I knew how. I asked a few AAs I met in meetings and I received a variety of responses. Needless to say I was confused. So an AA friend suggested I get a temporary sponsor. I liked the word temporary, so I agreed to give it a try. He suggested a man who I had seen in my evening meetings. He had more than 25 years of sobriety, he was well-spoken and funny, and he seemed to be knowledgeable about AA. In meetings, he often mentioned that he was a lawyer and a former Marine. I thought it curious that someone would share their profession in an AA meeting. I asked him if he would help me do my Fourth Step, and he agreed. He asked me to come over the following Saturday.

When I got to his place, he gave me some books: AA Comes of Age, Dr. Bob and the Good Oldtimers, Pass It On, and Came To Believe. I wasn’t familiar with any of these books at that time, and I appreciated the gifts. I was ready to begin work. I brought a note pad with me. But instead of discussing the Fourth Step, he began to talk about his membership in a group of lawyer friends on the East Coast who were part of an investment group. He said this investment group made lots of money for him and his friends. He suggested that if I gave him $1,000, the return on my investment would solve all my financial problems. Though I tried to get back to writing my Fourth Step, he kept going on about this investment opportunity and how it would help my family. This made me feel uncomfortable. I thanked him for the offer and told him I would have to think about it. He insisted it was a sure thing, but I didn’t waiver. I had made up my mind that I wasn’t going to give this guy my money. I was there to start my Fourth Step, not to get rich. I found out a year or so later that this guy had successfully scammed other AAs with the same investment scheme.

When I came to my first meeting, I was told that sobriety must come first. It was that AA singleness of purpose that kept me from falling for this man’s investment scheme. It protected me against a predatory member of AA. I often share that I came to AA for sobriety—not for money, a job, or romance. At that time I had an aversion to trusting people, and this experience could have been devastating to my chance at recovery. Singleness of purpose gave me the strength to move on.

Treasurer's Written Report
March 10, 2021

Dear Intergroup Family,

Our contributions last month were $1,928.05 a vast improvement over February. Our Literature sales were $2,114.36.

Our Combined Accounts Bank Balance rose from $9,832.90 to $10,378.99 an increase of $546.09. The Central Office closed with a profit of $1,004.53 for the month of March. If we compare our account balances with last year, March 2020 ended with a Combined Account Balance of $14,384.01, so we are not experiencing the “bounce” we got last year before the pandemic really started to affect us.

The missing order of $178.62 has been replaced and fulfilled by AAWS, so our billing from them is now updated and accurate.

Zelle Account: A reminder that we are now able to receive contributions into our account using our new email address: deltcentral312@gmail.com.

PayPal Account: You can also send contributions through PayPal using our deltcentral312@gmail.com email account. When choosing PayPal, please be mindful that PayPal collects about 3.8% of your contributions, and Zelle is free to both our donors and us.

Both of these digital contribution tools are working smoothly.

Loving in Service,

Lynne Rodgers
Delta Intergroup Treasurer

Schedules: Sandi L. and Steve N. are doing a great job keeping both the printed and website schedules up to date.

Newsletter: Don’t forget to submit your May birthdays, as usual, by tomorrow, April 15.

Phone Line: All our volunteer positions are filled. There was a minor hiccup when the call-forwarding routine was changed by AT&T, but things are running smoothly now. I’m hoping Gavin from Recovery Central will be here tonight to give us an update on his trial run with their phone set up.

Spring Fest: We are moving ahead with our plans. We have a speaker in Tom A., known to many of us as Father Tom, and we have completed our panel line-up of speakers. The panel will be on “Getting Sober, Before and After the Covid”. I have attached a flyer for all of you to post/distribute in your home groups. We are hoping to organize a break out room AI-Anon participation concurrent with our Panel Discussion.

Central Office Bylaws: The Bylaws ad hoc committee met on March 24th, and it will most likely be several months before their work is done.

Elections: We jumped the gun by a month. Today we are announcing that elections for Treasurer and Recording Secretary will be held at June’s Intergroup meeting. We will be accepting nominations and volunteers at our May 5th meeting. Shortly after the meeting, we will issue a list of the nominees for you to take back to your groups. I have included the requirements and responsibilities for the two offices at the end of this packet. Nominees/volunteers must attend both meetings to be considered.

Transferring SNL Zoom ID to Delta IG: Saturday Night Live has a new Zoom meeting ID and password as we transfer it to Delta Intergroup’s Zoom Account. The new ID and password are posted on the website under events, and in the calendar in the newsletter. They are: ID: #870 4399 9037, Password: snlzoom. Cherokee Group will be hosting May’s SNL.

Posting Events on the Website: Just a reminder, when creating flyers for posting on the Website, be sure you DO NOT include any personal information, such as phone numbers and email addresses. Always use your group’s contact information. This website is available to anyone who stumbles across it, and we need to be careful about exposing ourselves. Also remember that flyers for your events need to identify themselves as A.A. functions.

The Alano Club: This morning, I learned from someone in the Stockton Group that the Alano Club building has been bought by someone in recovery. As a result, all the meetings in the building and the Alano Club will continue to have their home at 1810/1812 Monte Diablo Avenue.

Thank you for letting me bend your ears.

Lyne Rodgers
Assistant Manager

The PI/CPC Committee met on April 14, 2021. The following are highlights:

The Committee welcomed three new Reps! Emily - Cherokee; Janine – Lodi Solutions; and Ruben - Cherokee. Great to see more participation! You do NOT have to be a Group Rep to participate in PI/CPC, so members at large are welcome.

The Facilities Contact Coordinator, Casey M., has begun duties with a compilation of the contact information for all the facilities served by PI/CPC and the Area 82 H&I Committee. The list will eventually include faith leaders, mental wellness professionals, ER personnel, colleges and universities, and criminal justice personnel. The Committee is discussing the best way to make contact with these professionals, including a three-modality approach.

Valley Community Counseling is opening up to outside volunteers. A call has been placed to Marla Conboy to determine the schedule. In the past, the schedules for the three facilities have been rotational and varied from facility to facility. Full calendar rotation is expected to take several months to be fully implemented.

The Beginners’ Meeting is going well, with at least three to four newcomers each week. The Committee would like it to remain in operation, perhaps remaining virtual. This will be discussed in May. In the meanwhile, the Committee wants to confirm that the Zoom recurrence will not discontinue at the end of April.

The Committee is still attempting to reach the Delta College Nursing Program. One of the new Reps, Janine, is a graduate and will take on outreach to Delta College.

CSU Stanislaus has requested another virtual presentation to the student social workers, with no date set as yet. The Committee has agreed and is awaiting a date.

With the Drunk Driving Schools coming back to life, volunteers are welcome for presentations. The Committee will provide training and presentation materials.

In love and service,

Melody T. Chair, PI/CPC Committee

ODD’N’ENDS

“I think people would be happier if they admitted things more often. In a sense we are all prisoners of some memory, or fear, or disappointment - we are all defined by something we can’t change.” - Simon Van Booy, The Illusion of Separateness

“You have power over your mind – not outside events. Realize this, and you will find strength.” - Marcus Aurelius

“When we confess our sin, we agree with God that what he calls sin really is sin. It’s not our sin that keeps us from a relationship with God - but rather our attitude toward our sin, and how we deal with it.” - Denise Wilson

“Love takes off the masks we fear we cannot live without and know we cannot live within.” - James Baldwin

Some people never go crazy. What truly horrible lives they must lead.

- Charles Bukowski

“We are what we pretend to be, so we must be careful about what we pretend to be.” - Kurt Vonnegut

“For our sake and yours forget your name in the street; tell us what the world has been to you in the dark places and in the light. Don't tell us what to believe, what to fear. Show us belief's wide skirt and the stitch that unravels fear's caul.” - Toni Morrison, The Nobel Lecture In Literature, 1993

“Imperfection is beauty, madness is genius and it's better to be absolutely ridiculous than absolutely boring.” - Marilyn Monroe

“Yesterday is but today's memory, and tomorrow is today's dream.” -Khalil Gibran

“A hundred times every day I remind myself that my inner and outer life are based on the labors of other men, living and dead, and that I must exert myself in order to give in the same measure as I have received and am still receiving.” - Albert Einstein

“And I knew that it was better to live out one's absurdity than to die for that of others.” - Ralph Ellison

It is better to keep your mouth closed and let people think you are a fool than to open it and remove all doubt.
